

How to Start Your Singing Career

Building Your Singing Skills

Cultivate your talent

Learn to read sheet music.

Take voice lessons

Do your research

Learn an instrument.

Cultivate your talent.

You need to discover who you are as a singer and performer before you begin trying to launch your singing career. Start out by experimenting singing different genres of music. This will help you figure out what kind of singing style comes naturally to you. Take note of things you learn about yourself as a singer, for example: your vocal range, singing styles that are easier and more difficult to pull off, and what wears out your voice.

Learn to read sheet music.

In the music industry, if you want to be considered a professional, you need to be ready to sing whatever someone puts in front of you. This could mean singing off a piece of sheet music

Take voice lessons

You want to learn how to bring out the best in your voice. Hiring a vocal coach can help you reach your greatest potential. Vocal coaches can remedy poor technique while addressing your strong and weak areas as a singer

Learn an instrument

Learn to play the piano or guitar so you can be a multi-faceted artist, and perform more independently. Learning an instrument also helps you play underlying notes in songs, which can give your performance a unique addition

Do your research

Analyze performances of some of your favorite singers. Look up videos of live performances, and take note of their stage presence, Doing some research can provide you with background knowledge about how other people in your position have found success in your anticipated field.

A man wearing a black cap and sunglasses is shown in profile, facing right, in a recording studio. He is positioned in front of a professional microphone with a pop filter. The background is dark with some out-of-focus equipment and a warm light source on the right.

THANK YOU

ZACH SALTER